The Regatta.

The third and last regatta of the season of the Carolina Yacht Club comes off this afternoon over the usual course at Wrightsville Sound. We hope that there will be a good stiff breeze to fill the sails of the competing yachts, and that the participants may have as pleasant a time on this as on previous occasions.

Since the last regatta the owners of the different yachts have been very busy refitting and repainting them, and there can be no excuses made this time about not having everything in readiness. The interest on the occasion will naturally be between the Retta and the Carolina, as these two beautiful yachts are conceded to be the fleetest in the Club, and in all recent races where there was no accident happening, either the one or the other has invariably taken the prize.

We feel proud of these beautiful little craft, and all lovers of yachting among our citizens feel proud of them, having been built here and by our own mechanics, and although newer and larger yachts may be entered at Regattas hereafter, we will ever have fond recollections of these two favorite boats.

We learn that there will be several new yachts built for members of the Club by next Spring, of a larger class than any now here, and on improved models, and while these new boats will be twenty feet long or even longer, they will not draw as much water as the boats now in the Club.

The Five Hundred Dollar Legal Tender Counterfeit.

This is the most dangerous counterfeit that has been out for a long time. Several of the banks have been victimized and the affair has caused much excitement. The bills were put out at the time when people are in the habit of getting large bills for holding and this class of notes is especially popular.

The following is a description of the difference between the genuine and spurious, taken from the Chronicle:

The upright that holds the balance of the scales held in hand of female figures shows a white line in the counterfeit over lower part of the palm of hand to second figure; in the genuine, the upright is quite black and lost in shadow.

The lower part of the right (in the portrait) lapel of coat on portrait of Adams in the counterfeit forms an angle, in the genuine is a distinct curved line. Also, the buttons in the counterfeit are irregular in shape, while in the genuine they are decidedly round and darker in color. Particular attention is called to button on left side of coat on the counterfeit.

In the word "Washington," in the counterfeit, the black shade forming the first stroke of the letter W forms an angle at the bottom; in the genuine note it forms a curve.

In the ruled shading under the right hand stroke of the letter W, and over the letters "a" and "s" there are four ruled lines on the counterfeit; in the genuine there are but three. Under the letters "a" and "s" in the word Washington, in the counterfeit, there are five ruled lines; in the genuine there are but four. Also, under the letter "h," same word, there are four ruled lines in the counterfeit; in the genuine there are but three.

At the bottom of the letter F, in the denomination title, there are five ruled lines. The localized fiber on the left of the portrait is blue in the genuine; but without color in the counterfeit.

The red seal in the genuine is printed in a delicate carmine color; in the counterfeit it is more of a brick color, and has a heavy appearance, more especially the rays which form the outside of the seal.

Attention is called to the blurred and scratchy appearance of the lathe-work and lettering on the back of the counterfeit, which upon a comparison with the genuine will readily be perceived.

In answer to the oft-repeated charge of corruption in the Republican party, the golden sentences of Senator Morton, in his great speech at Athens upon the opening of the Ohio campaign, should be borne in mind. He says in his own words:

"The Republican party has shown from time to time that it knows how to break its own idols. No man is so high as to be above the most severe and searching investigation, and, if found wanting, is at once put aside, however long and distinguished may have been his services."

The Bond Forgery.

No new developments have as yet been made public in this case. The principals have not been captured, though strenuous efforts are being made. It has transpired that a large amount of these bonds have been sent to Europe, and we will undoubtedly hear of heavy transactions there. The losses in Wall street do not appear to cause much of a flurry, and business goes along in its usual active way.

Mr. LEONARD BROWN was before Justice Dowling on Monday, when the following occurred, according to the New York Herald:

Leonard Brown, who was arrested on Saturday by Detective Sampson for being concerned in the circulation of forged bonds of the New York Central Railroad, was brought to the Tomb Police Court yesterday morning by detectives Sampson and Ryder. Mr. Brown is a man evidently, from his appearance, over sixty years of age. He has gray side whiskers, sparse gray hair on his head, his eyes are sunken, and his features have a pinched, wizened look. He was dressed in a brown, snuff-colored coat, a pair of much-worn black pants, and on his feet were a pair of low-cut prunella gaiters.

As soon as he was arraigned before his Honor Judge Dowling, he was recognized at once as the same party who had come forward to testify in behalf of William H. Lambert, at present locked up in the Tombs. William H. Lambert was arrested last March by Captain Irving in Reservoir square, with stolen bonds in his possession, and is now awaiting trial on a charge preferred against him at that time.

Judge Dowling said to the prisoner, "What have you to say for yourself now? Are you guilty or not guilty?"

The accused, not the least abashed, commenced what was evidently meant to be a long and detailed statement of his case—how he was going along the street and was tapped on the shoulder by a strange man, who told him he had a quantity of New York Central bonds.

Judge Dowling interrupted the speaker, saying, "That will do; that will do. When you were here before, and made a long affidavit in favor of Lambert, I told you I did not believe you."

The case was then adjourned till the afternoon, on account of the absence of the principal witnesses. Punctually at half-past one, Mr. Wooster Sherman, Mr. F. N. Holbrook, of the firm of Messrs. Eddy & Co., and Mr. William H. Fields, counsel for Mr. Brown, made their appearance. Mr. Sherman came forward and took a seat alongside of the clerk, Mr. Finley. He was about making his formal affidavit, when

THE PRISONER CROSSED THE ROOM, and, saluting Mr. Sherman, extended his hand. They shook hands together, and Brown remarked—

"Well, they have locked me up, as you see; but it's all right."

"I hope so," kindly remarked Mr. Sherman. "Can you identify the man who gave you the bonds?"

Mr. Brown—No, I cannot; they were lying on the desk and given me to negotiate.

Mr. Sherman—Well, I hope you can clear yourself.

Mr. Brown (confidently)—Oh yes; that will be all right.

At this moment Judge Dowling noticed the conversation for the first time, and quickly said, "I desire that you hold no conversation with the prisoner. Here, officer, let this man (Brown) take a seat over in that corner."

Accordingly Sergeant Quinn escorted the prisoner to a secluded place behind one side of

THE LARGE IRON SAFE in the examination room.

Mr. Sherman then proceeded to make his affidavit. He said that Brown called on him about half-past two on Saturday, and took out of an envelope containing a number of other bonds the bond No. 204; he believed the same to be genuine, but failed to negotiate it on account of the lateness of the hour; that he subsequently discovered that the bond was forged; Mr. Holbrook, of the firm of Eddy & Co., No. 26 Pine street, pronounced the bond No. 204 to be a forgery.

Mr. Holbrook stated that he had been for twelve years clerk in a bank at Albany, and was perfectly familiar with Erastus Corning's signature, and he unhesitatingly pronounced the signature to the bond in question a forgery.

While Mr. Sherman was making his affidavit, he hesitated a long time as to whether he believed the prisoner guilty of an intent to cheat and defraud him.

Judge Dowling explained the law in the matter to Mr. Sherman, and asked him, if, after the information he had received, he could not form an opinion as to the prisoner's guilty knowledge.

Mr. Sherman (cautiously)—I cannot say, for I have stated to several brokers already that I believed he was not the principal, but a mere tool in the hands of others.

Judge Dowling—I want you, Mr. Sherman, to say whether or not you believe the prisoner guilty, considering the amount of information you have received.

Mr. Sherman—Well I cannot say; I have hardly had the time to form a positive opinion.

Judge Dowling (somewhat excited)—I wish I never had any of these Wall street cases. You never can get a banker or broker that knows anything when they are put on the witness stand. (Aside.) They are afraid to have their books examined; that's what's the matter. Judge Dowling continued—It is easier to get a case from the Five Points straight than one where bankers and brokers or lawyers are concerned. "I must confess (addressing himself to Mr. Sherman) I did not like your handshaking with the prisoner when he came into the room."

Mr. Sherman was then cross-examined by Mr. Field, counsel for the defence: Mr. Brown did not give any particular description of the bond when he first came to me; I did not examine it at that time; he gave the name of no principal; I have not known Mr. Brown very long; I understood he was a very poor man, that he was a street broker. I thought at the time it was an unusual transaction for him; I did not suppose he was the owner; I submitted the bond to Mr. Fitch, and he was to MAKE THE LOAN at two o'clock; I had some doubts as to the genuineness of the bonds, or I should not have asked any questions about the signature; I thought the signature of Mr. Corning was larger than usual, and that such an amount of bonds in the possession of Mr. Brown was suspicious.

Counsel—Do you believe, from all the facts in the case, that when Mr. Brown offered you the bonds in question he knew they were counterfeit?

Mr. Sherman—I am not able to make my mind up on the question; I am anxious to do myself, the public, and even the prisoner justice, but my mind is shaken on the subject.

Judge Dowling—What do you mean by a street broker?

Mr. Sherman—I mean a man who has not much money or much of an office.

Judge Dowling—What is called down in Wall street a curbstone broker?

Mr. Sherman—Yes, I believe that is the name.

Judge Dowling—Do you know Mr. Brown?

Mr. Sherman—Yes, for three months. Mr. Fields at this stage wished to put the prisoner on the stand, to be examined in his own behalf, but Judge Dowling objected, as the case had been prolonged past court hours, and a further hearing was set down for ten o'clock to-day.

The above premiums are for crops produced by the use of Soluble Sea Island Guano and in combination with plantation manure only; and the awarding of said premiums is left discretionary with the Committee of the Association, under their rules.

Competitors are required to furnish the General Secretary with a detailed statement of their modes of application and culture.

PROSPECTUS THE EVENING POST.

J. C. MANN, EDITOR & PROPRIETOR:

Published every evening, except Sunday, at Five Dollars per ANNUM.

The Post is designed to reach all classes of citizens, and its subscription price is therefore placed so low as to be within the reach of all. It contains the up to the time of going to press,

TELEGRAPHIC,

BY MAIL,

COMMERCIAL

AND LOCAL.

It should be in the hands of every man who desires to know what has transpired during the day, and, as it aims to give its publisher hopes it will prove a welcome guest in many families.

THE POST

is sprightly without being sensational, and it carefully excludes all objectionable incidents and reports calculated to offend the sensibilities of the most fastidious. As an

Advertising Medium

It claims to be first class. It has a good and constantly increasing circulation, and is read by almost every business man in the city.

Politically the Post is

UNSWERVINGLY REPUBLICAN.

Its editor having been a consistent member of that party since 1855, through its vicissitudes and triumphs, he claims to speak advisedly when advocating its principles. He is not, however, an "extremist," and accords to others what he claims for himself, the right of free thought and of free speech.

THE ADVERTISING RATES of the Post, like its subscription price, are at liberal and at living prices, as an examination of them will show, and bespeak a share of public patronage.

is closely identified with the local welfare of the Cape Fear region, and the believers in progress, whether

AGRICULTURAL,

MECHANICAL, or

COMMERCIAL,

will find an enthusiastic ally in THE POST.

THE POST

is opposed to monopolies, but in favor of internal improvements, and a firm believer in the patronage and support of home enterprises and institutions.

will be maintained for all new subscribers, and all old subscribers renewing prior to the 15th day of January, 1873, when the above Club rates will take effect.

THE NEW YORK WEEKLY TIMES

Will contain Selected Editorials from the Daily Times, News, Domestic and Foreign; The Proceedings of Congress; the State Legislatures; Full and Interesting Correspondence; Book Reviews; The Choicest Literary Selections; while its most prominent feature will be a COMPLETE AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT, with original articles from practical farmers; full reports of the American Institute Farmers Club; complete weekly market reports; financial, domestic produce, live stock, dry goods and general.

AS A FAMILY PAPER,

The Times will have no superior; it will be free from all appeals to vulgar and impure taste, and will be safely admitted to every domestic circle.

AS A REPUBLICAN JOURNAL,

The Times will be done up, as in the past, to an intelligent and forcible support of the Republican Party. Its course in reference to the Tammany Ring, at a time when all the other daily papers in New York obstructed and discouraged its efforts, attests its sincerity in the cause of Reform. The Times stood alone demanding Reform from 1869 to the close of 1871, and there is no sincere and honest proposal for Reform, in any branch of the Government, which will not be heartily supported by the Times. But with a view to assisting ambitious politicians or dangerous demagogues to reach power under false pretences. It will not encourage defection from the Republican Party, which is still the party of progress, security and national prosperity.

It will sustain, with all the force and influence at its command, the principles and policy which have rendered that party so justly famous in our history. It will advocate those measures by which the honor, the peace, and the prosperity of the nation can best be secured, and promoted, and will constantly study the welfare of the people, to whom it is the party of progress, security and national prosperity.
